

Courier News

BEST BETS: look

Laura Granieri, Courier News
Published: November 30, 2007

Lenny Correa, Drawing Machine 02

Feed your head Thursday night at Crossroads Theatre.

The nonprofit group Collaborative Arts, or coLAB, will be hosting a free art exhibit and reception at the New Brunswick theater following a performance of Daniel Beaty's Obie-winning one-man show, "Emergence-See!"

The group, which facilitates performance and exhibit opportunities for New Brunswick artists, is presenting the third installment of its ongoing exhibition program, "Resonate." Works by Rutgers University alumni Lenny Correa, Ryan Gutierrez, Jen Park and Matt West will be on view.

Look for an experimental set-up of sculpture and video, as well as drawings and paintings made with the help of machines and toy robots. You are not required to purchase tickets to the performance in order to view the art exhibit.

"Resonate," reception and exhibit, 9 to 11 p.m. Thursday, second- and third-floor lobbies, Crossroads Theatre, 7 Livingston Ave., New Brunswick. Free. (732) 763-0176 or www.colab-arts.org.